Comparing Dating Services

When I broke up with my partner after 6 years together I decided to take a break from relationships but soon I found I was lonely and depressed. It was then I figured I would give a dating service a try. I had a few friends that used Entre-Nous Network before and I wanted to try one other local service at the same time and decided on Nuera Network so I could compare the quality of prospective partners offered.

This is starting to sound like a car or cattle auction instead of my dating life. I joined both services in early July and by the end of the month had 2 dates from each. All I can say is wow! Thank goodness I did stay single any longer or I might never have met Ethan. He is everything I ever wanted in men and then some. We get along amazing and almost never argue. We plan to move in together in January and who knows maybe marriage is in our future.

The best advice I can give someone that is newly single is not to listen to anyone else when deciding whether to get back into the dating scene. It is a personal choice and everyone is different.
